Amber,

I enjoyed observing your class last week. Students were engaged and quietly working on their reading log reflections. The expectations for the class period were clearly posted on the overhead. All students asked knew the purpose of the editing checklist and the color coding strategy. They were very forthcoming in the understanding that it helped improve their writing.

One student was moved because of talking. However, the noise level was easily maintained and re-established with gentle verbal reminders.

The word wall for 'said' was used several times by a student.

The overall atmosphere of the class was focused and quiet with all students engaged in the task at hand.

Thanks!

Micki
